

Why a Maintenance Agreement Should Be Considered

Why would you need a maintenance agreement?

- Protection for your technology investment
- Immediate and long-term reassurance
- Reduces unexpected expenditures for repairs
- Delays in AV functionality can be detrimental to project collaboration and deadlines
- Saves money over an extended period of time

Added benefits of a maintenance agreement

- Technical support and customer service available via phone or on-site
- Expertise from professionals who are manufacturer and industry-trained and certified
- Customizable service agreement to suit specific needs
- Comprehensive service and rapid response time
- Thorough troubleshooting and diagnosis of AV solution plus uninstallation of equipment needing repair
- Projector loaner program
- Reassurance that your equipment will continue to work efficiently for a longer period of time

When buying any product or piece of equipment, an investment is made with the expectation that the product will be of high-quality, providing longer equipment life and optimal operations. Making an investment in any audio/visual solution comes with this same expectation.

→ Data Projections knows your expectations.

Our job doesn't end after the technology solution has been integrated. Our solutions will be simple to use, but down the road the equipment will need to be serviced to maintain longevity. Let's face it, sometimes things happen even with superior quality equipment — and you'll need to make a service call. That's why we have a customizable service option that will give you peace of mind that your equipment will continue to operate, engage and allow you to continue to collaborate, long after we've completed the installation.

Contact your Data Projections representative today to make sure you and your AV solutions are protected. You can rest assured that any future AV needs will be taken care of because we will be here when you need us.
